Says Mr. Strafiss, in the con. con: "Go and read the history of the Roman Empire." Good idea, Mr. Strauss. We will proceed to do so. There is ample time between this and the adjournment of the convention to read the history of the Roman Empire and several other empires. The people who pay the taxes are not usually impatient and they have plenty of time to read and study history, both ancient and modern-especially modern. They have learned much in the last five months, and some lessons that will be servicable when they are next called upon to select public servants to represent them in conventions and the like.

Bruce Price, a New York architect, proposes to erect a building 32 stories high, and which is to be 442 feet above the level of the ground. It is to be built of iron and steel. The height of the building will be about 150 yards. As steel is said to attract lightning, the man who occupies the 32d story had better keep himself enveloped in a feather bed or some other first class lightning protector. Some of the advantages of this sky scraping residence will be pure air, seclusion from noise and dust and protection from pick-pockets and sneak thieves. The tops of the tallest trees in its immediate vicinity will be so far below the thirty-twoster that the crowing of the venerable rooster will not be likely to disturb his morning slumbers. Nor will the mewing of the Thomas cat upon the adjacent wood pile mingle with his dreams so seriously as to interfere with his plans to get what little of the goods of this world there are in the possession of his neighbor. Lancaster wants a 32 story building, she needs a 32 story building and must have a 32 story building. Washington News.

[To the Editor of the Interior Journal.] WASHINGTON, Feb. 16 .- Mr. Cleveland's letter against the free and unlimited independent coinage of silver did not create the excitement in Congress that the sensational newspapers have said it did. In the first place the views expressed by Mr. Cleveland are precisely those held by him and publicly expressed just before his inauguration as president in 1885, so that a reiteration of them was no surprise to those acquainted with the man. Of course there are differences of opinion among democrats am in Congress as to the wisdom of having ... 5 12p m taken this time to reiterate them, but Mr. Cleveland's friends point to the fact that he did not do so until asked to take part in the anti-silver meeting in New York. They say that if he had not given his opinion in answer to that invitation he would have been open to the charge of cowardice, and everybody knows that there is nothing approaching cowardice in Grover Cleveland's make-Many eminent democratic Senators and Representatives in their disappointment at seeing the last hope of the passage of the free coinage bill by the House at this session vanish, as it did with the publication of Mr. Cleveland's letter. said, upon the spur of the moment, things which upon cool second thoughts they will probably regret. the private car of the would-be presidential candidate of the Farmers Alliance, Senator Stanford, and the Senate, has by resolution authorized two committees-Naval affairs and Canadian relations-to travel around at government expense next summer. Senator Plumb stirred up the bile of some of the members of the latter committee by saying W. No one appears now to anticipate an extra session of Congress this spring, although of course it is possible. There is a rumor that the republicans of the Senate are going to try to rush the Force bill through during the closing hours of the session, but I don't think there is anything in it.
